I. Introduction

This is a summary of the eMarketing Special Interest Group's (eM-SIG) February 2009 Presentation, “Getting Personal with PURL Technology: Blending Online and Offline Direct Marketing.” The purpose of this seminar was to demonstrate how and why e-marketers should add a Personalized URL (PURL) component to their direct marketing efforts. A PURL is a web address that incorporates a recipient's name. Personalized URL marketing is the technique of adding such a web address as one of the response channels on a direct mail piece and following it up with highly targeted landing pages for greater impact. This event showed how to generate effective and beneficial direct marketing campaigns using PURL technology.

The eM-SIG organizes relevant roundtables, chosen by and for its members, covering a variety of e-marketing topics. If you are interested in joining the eM-SIG and attending a roundtable, visit the eM-SIG Web site and register on the “Join Us” page.

III. Advantages of Using a PURL-Direct Mail Combo

- PURLs make your message personalized and relevant to each prospective customer which makes it more likely to grab their attention.
- Using a PURL will improve response rates compared to using traditional direct marketing methods alone.
- PURLs make it easier to track customer data and interest levels by allowing you to know when someone logs onto their personal web page and what information they are looking at.
- Once a prospect signs onto their personal web page, they can be further persuaded by customized marketing messages just for them.
- Since the PURLs are unique to each individual person, the prospect will trust the company and will be more willing to give more information about themselves.
- PURLs help cut back on wasteful paper products that are thrown away. With PURLs, only one small paper mailing needs to be sent out then a company can turn to online methods.
- Using a PURL connects the dots between using personalize e-mail and direct mail methods. Instead of sending prospects to the central Web page, the company can send them to their very own page.
- PURLs allow companies to save money on paper printing, postage, and constant mailing campaigns reaching only some of the right people.

IV. Getting Personal with PURL: Speaker Highlights

4.1 Joe Mehl Chairman of DISPATCH:

What is PURL and How Does it Work?

- Uses for PURL include:
 - Sales Prospecting
 - Customer Surveys
 - Event Registration
 - Information Delivery
 - Customer and User Feedback
 - Trade Show Prospecting

- How a PURL Works:
 - Contact receives a direct mail or e-mail message describing an offer that entices the recipient to visit their PURL
 - Welcome page is directed to the recipient using their name
 - A contact information page is brought up
 - Prospect asked to complete a brief survey
 - A marketing message is given
 - Thank you page providing other links and downloads
 - Follow up is immediate
 - Sales process on individual can now begin

- PURL is not in itself a marketing campaign but is a carefully planned component of a campaign.

- 40% Data; 40% Offer; 20% Graphics.

- A PURL invites recipient to their own landing page which allows personal interaction using information about the contact from a data base.

- The PURL can record visitor behavior while soliciting for more information.

4.2 George Sackandy CEO and Founder of Intelmarx:

Ingredients of a PURL Campaign

- Data drives the following:
 - Strategy
 - Creativity
 - Offers
 - Graphics
 - Media
- Direct mail has an industry response rate of under 2% which means there is a failure rate of 98%
- "Americans are bombarded with 5,000 marketing messages each day"
- Key ingredients of a PURL Campaign:
 - Attract- Through Variable Data Printing
 - Interact- Through Personal URL's and Dynamic Surveys
 - React- By Online Dashboard and E-mail Notices
- Case Study- Albertson College
 - 1000s of Brochures used to be sent out to prospective students covering all programs and activities within the college only reaching a 2% response rate.
 - The college began using variable data printing, where students were sent personalized information based on their interests.
 - This led to a 18.7% response rate by combining direct mail and PURL.
